4 Trends That Negatively Affect Biblical Literacy

BY JOHN HAILES

Biblical literacy has reportedly been on the decline for several years. While the whole Church bears some culpability for this development, I can't help but wonder whether our ministry to children plays a larger role than we are willing to admit.

With the rise of family ministry in recent years, many have advocated transferring the responsibility of discipleship to parents. There are real benefits to parents taking the lead. Yet I can't help but wonder whether this emphasis has allowed churches to relax in their discipleship endeavors.

As a children's pastor for the past six years, I have felt increased pressure to provide fun events and an exciting atmosphere for children on Sundays. I have at times focused my energy on ensuring kids enjoy attending church. Unfortunately, I have found that this leads to children who love attending church but don't know and love Jesus.

This is where the attractional church model and discipleship clash. You can't always dress discipleship up as fun and enjoyable for a child. There are times it takes focus and discipline. Biblical literacy is not just about knowing the facts of the Bible. It involves knowing how to find passages, how to read the Bible in context, and how to understand Scripture. Mostly though, biblical literacy is being able to interpret Scripture through the power of the Holy Spirit and apply it to your life.

I've noticed four trends that I believe are affecting biblical literacy.

Kids Seldom Open Bibles in Church

It's not fun and exciting for kids to learn how to find a passage in the Bible, but it is necessary. How can we expect children to open Bibles at home if they never open them at church? Children need to see us read from our Bibles, and they need opportunities to ask questions. Of course, not every child owns a Bible—and those who do aren't necessarily carrying them to church. However, children's ministries could keep enough kid-friendly Bibles on hand for every elementary-age child who attends.

We Rely Too Much on Video-Based Lessons

Both of the larger churches I have served at used the most expensive and most popular children's ministry curriculum—and both opted for video-based lessons. At each church, this was one of the first things I changed. We can't build a generation of biblically literate children if we always put them in front of screens for their lessons. They need to see us read from our Bibles, and they need opportunities to ask questions.

Our Lessons Don't Always Go Deep Enough

Senior pastors and children's pastors often select curriculum based on the surface images rather than the substance. If a curriculum for children doesn't have the best graphics or videos, it may not get a second look.

We need to do a better job of picking children's curriculum based on the strength of the content. Does our curriculum just focus on Bible memorization? Does it instruct us to read Scripture during the lesson? Does it create space for kids to open Bibles? Does it cover the whole Bible? Does it teach the overarching story of the Bible—using each lesson to point to Jesus—or does it just present random stories from the Bible?

There Is a Lack of Response Time

We are not consistently providing time for children to respond to God's Word. Biblical literacy is not just about knowing Scripture; that is simple head knowledge, or memorization. Biblical literacy involves the application of Scripture, a process that involves heart transformation and spiritual formation.

Children need time to respond to God's Word. They need a place where they can learn to seek the help of the Holy Spirit in applying Scripture to their lives. If we don't teach our children to respond to God's Word at church, how will they know to respond to it when they read it at home?

I certainly don't believe anyone means to create biblical illiteracy. Churches are well-intentioned in their desire to please children, but I do think we would be foolish to expect different results if we continue these same practices.

Volunteer Appreciation Ideas

BY NINA DURNING

Sunday morning ministry is made possible by the countless volunteers who help oversee the different aspects of your church experience. From ushering to greeting, to a parking lot, and yes, to children's ministry, volunteers are giving up their personal time to serve the Lord and the church they call home. Without them, ministry could not be done effectively. With them, God can change an entire city's spiritual climate. Volunteers are very important, and it's important for those in leadership to communicate the volunteer's importance and appreciate all they do within the faith community.

HERE ARE SOME FUN AND CREATIVE WAYS FOR YOU TO SHOW APPRECIATION TO THE VOLUNTEERS IN YOUR CHILDREN'S MINISTRY AND IN YOUR WHOLE CHURCH!

Social Media Appreciation Highlights

This is a very fun way to show appreciation to your children's ministry volunteers. On Sunday, have a thank-you card with a small gift in it, such as a Starbucks gift card, ready to give to a volunteer. Have your social media team livestream you surprising that volunteer in their classroom as they are serving, and present them with the card and gift, thanking them for all they do. Posting live on your children's ministry social media, or church social media, can make everyone aware of all the volunteers do. If you can, show appreciation to one volunteer each month, so it becomes part of the culture for your church. You will begin to see people thanking that volunteer in the halls of your church throughout the month!

Birthday and Anniversary Cards

Giving these cards is a great way to show your volunteers you're thinking about them throughout the week. This gives them value and shows them that you as a leader genuinely care about them. Create a list of volunteers through your scheduling system or check-in system. Sort them by month and send the cards to the volunteers for their birthday or wedding anniversary. This small gesture will go a long way with your volunteers.

Volunteer of the Month Highlights

This could be another fun way to show appreciation to your volunteers. Pick a volunteer each month from each of your age groups. Highlight the volunteer on a bulletin board or public board outside that age group's room. Below the board, have cards and envelopes available for kids and parents to fill out to thank that volunteer in their age group. Use the month to highlight that volunteer and thank them publicly in the presence of the kids.

Volunteer Appreciation Dinner or Banquet

One last thing you can do is have a volunteer appreciation dinner/banquet. Taking the time to gather all your volunteers together to fellowship around food is a great way to say thank you. During the dinner, have fun things like games and a video of pictures from that year. While a dinner is a budget item, it can show your volunteers your commitment to appreciate and recognize them for all the things they do throughout the year to help your ministry be successful. Make it an event to remember!

Volunteers are the heartbeat of the church. As leaders, make sure you are taking care of them and showing them how much you appreciate all they do.

It's Time to Say Thank You!

A young boy with short dark hair, wearing a blue and black striped t-shirt, is smiling broadly as he works on a project. He is looking down at something in his hands. An adult, seen from the side in a light blue shirt, is also working on the project. The background is a blurred library or classroom with bookshelves. Discipleship through Relationship

BY DARIN POE

Jesus calls us to “go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you” (Matthew 28:19–20).

In our context, a disciple is simply a fully devoted follower of Jesus. And, discipleship is the process of becoming a fully devoted follower of Jesus. This process happens most effectively through relationship.

When I think about discipleship, my mind goes to the calling of the first disciples in Matthew 4:18–22. As Jesus was walking along the shore of the Sea of Galilee, He called the first disciples—Simon, Andrew, James, and John. Jesus simply said to them “Come.”

It was an invitation to join Him, to spend time together, to do life together. It was an invitation into discipleship. We need to invite students into that same discipleship relationship. Jesus calls us all to come and follow Him, and our job as teachers and leaders is to extend that invitation to our students, not only with Jesus but with us as well.

An action is then required. “Follow” isn’t necessarily a hard concept, but it is something that we choose to do or not do. “Come” is an invitation, but following is a commitment. With the disciples, following Jesus meant traveling with Him and obeying His teaching and modeling of God’s will.²

We have to help students understand what they are saying yes to when they accept Jesus. They have to choose to discipline themselves and put their faith into action on a daily basis. Students need to know that it is ultimately a commitment to a lifestyle that they make for a lifetime.

Through that commitment, there is a connection. Jesus was saying to the disciples, “Live with Me and learn by watching Me. Own My values and priorities. Learn to become passionate for the things I live for. And follow My example by doing the ministry I have come to do.”³

There was a connection made because they entered into a relationship with Jesus.

As leaders, it is our responsibility to demonstrate to our students how we connect with Jesus by following His example and commands. I believe youth leaders should be able to say to their students the same thing that Paul said in Scripture: “Follow my example, as I follow the example of Christ” (1 Corinthians 11:1). In order to do that, our example needs to be worth following.

After this, transformation takes place.

Jesus said He would “make” the disciples fishers of men, which means He was going to teach them what they needed to know. They would experience the transformation as they lived alongside Jesus and learned from the way He thought, spoke, and acted.

Leaders, let’s teach students that, in order to be a disciple of Jesus, we don’t have to know everything all at once. Through the Word of God, prayer, and other disciplines, they can experience transformation in their lives, thoughts, actions, and words. Their discipleship journey is a process and transformation that comes after committing to follow and submitting to what they’re being called to.

What are you intentionally doing to help your students commit to Jesus?

Here are a few ways you can connect with students and build those relationships that promote the discipleship process.

- 1 Meet with them before or after school at a doughnut shop or coffee spot.
- 2 Invite small groups over to your house for a meal and game night.
- 3 Show up for their sporting events, concerts, or plays.
- 4 Serve together around the church or in the community.
- 5 Participate in activities together: bowling, miniature golf, trampoline park, and concerts.
- 6 Go on a missions trip together.
- 7 Take a road trip to somewhere fun.

The activity doesn’t matter as much as the time together. Build healthy relationships with your students and intentionally include conversations about Jesus. Show them and tell them how you are following Jesus. Challenge them to do the same, and disciples will be made.
