The Road to Emmaus:

How God Turns Biblical Engagement into Heart Transformation

By Jon Catron

You learn a lot on a long trip together.

Whether a missions trip or just the typical family vacation, lessons can be gleaned from a journey that elude us in normal life. A few years ago, while on a trip to Tanzania, several pastors and I were mountain hiking when we quickly realized that we weren't adequately trained for the extreme heat and terrain. Two of the men became extremely fatigued and had to rely on others and miraculously answered prayers in order to safely make it off of that mountain.

Both of those men and their families heard God calling them into full-time missions and went to serve as missionaries to Tanzania. God used that journey to change their lives.

God also gives us a unique look at another journey that we can all go on that will lead us to a moment of incredible revelation of who Jesus is. In Luke 24:13–22, we read the story of the two followers of Jesus who left Jerusalem after His crucifixion and were on the road to Emmaus. They had to be enduring extreme confusion and grief after seeing the Man whom they had followed and had believed to be the Messiah die a cruel death and apparently leave them abandoned. It was at this moment in their lives and on this journey to Emmaus, that the resurrected Jesus appeared to them on the road and began to walk with them. In God's providential plan, He had blinded their eyes from being able to recognize that it was Jesus. And yet, on this journey, the Son of Man took them on a deeper spiritual journey that would ultimately end in their hearts being transformed and having a deep recognition of who Jesus is.

On the road to Emmaus, Jesus deliberately modeled for us an incredible method for Bible engagement and transformation. Luke's Gospel records in chapter 24 verse 27 that, "Jesus took them through the writings of Moses and all the prophets, explaining from all the Scriptures the things concerning himself." Jesus used the previously written and inspired Scriptures to testify about Himself. This was significant because those leaders would have lived in a culture where the Scriptures were valued and deemed as authoritative. He was making sure that they knew that He was there as a fulfillment of all that God had spoken in the past and was continuing to speak through His life. This awareness that all of Scripture points to and is fulfilled in the person of Jesus Christ is a crucial element in the Bible engagement journey. When we go on this journey in God's Word our hearts and lives are changed.

These two leaders had that moment of enlightenment after having spent the time with Jesus on the road to Emmaus and then sitting at dinner that night watching Him break bread and give thanks to God. This had to be an intense moment of clarity and remembrance when they finally understood that this stranger who had walked with them on the journey was actually the same Man that He had been describing through the path of Scripture. Luke 24:31–32 records this moment:

Suddenly, their eyes were opened, and they recognized him. And at that moment he disappeared! They said to each other, “Didn’t our hearts burn within us as he talked with us on the road and explained the Scriptures to us?”

Bible engagement should always lead us to that moment of recognition of Jesus and His power to transform our lives. God’s Word truly is living and active and can impact our lives in ways that we never anticipate. As followers of Jesus and as those that have been called to walk with others on this journey with God’s Word, I would offer three simple applications that can be learned from this story of the Emmaus journey in Luke 24.

1 Do Something. It does not have to be complicated; simply get on the path to Bible engagement and start. Reading plans are a great place to start. Make Bible engagement a daily priority even when your emotions and feelings try to allow other things to take precedence.

2 Walk in community. It becomes much easier to stay on the path if someone else is walking with you. Educators tell us that most people learn better in community. We should recognize this same truth as we engage with God’s Word. Community also helps us ensure that our interpretation and application of Scripture is valid.

3 Recognize Jesus on the journey. Just like the disciples on the Emmaus journey had that moment of recognition, we too can come to the point that we see Jesus all through Scripture. God wants to make that clear for us. That moment usually comes when your approach to Scripture shifts from “What do I need to read today?” to “What is God going to say to me today?”

Listen. He still speaks. God bless you on your Emmaus journey!

6 Keys to a Successful Kids Ministry

By Kelly Presson

What if you could take your kids ministry from surviving to thriving? You can!

As a children's leader, it's easy to feel overwhelmed by the pressure to make a lasting difference in kids' lives. Fortunately, with these practical, easy-to-implement strategies, both you and your ministry will be headed toward lasting success:

1 Work on building your relationship with God and your family

We know where we are spiritually and with our family, but how important is it to work on building and strengthening these relationships? Obviously, we can work on a lot of relationships, but if we get our relationship with God and our family in the proper place, things are going to turn out much better.

2 Pursue more of the Holy Spirit

Continually pursue the fruit and gifts of the Spirit and the goal of being continually sensitive to God's voice. When you hear and obey His guidance, you WILL be successful! Check out

Strong Enough to Last by David Boyd for more strategies on building lifetime faith in your ministry.

3 Focus on your Kidmin goals

Become laser focused on what you want your kids to leave service with weekly and as they graduate from your ministry. Focus yourself and your teaching around building a rock-solid spiritual foundation. Find out more about the 8 Goals of Kidmin and how you can target them in your ministry: <https://kidmin.ag.org/8goals>

4 Work on building and equipping your team

Many leaders struggle building teams because equipping volunteers for ministry that really matters can be daunting. Even so, you have to focus on building and equipping your team well to reach more kids and be more effective in ministry. Don't risk burnout by trying to do everything yourself! Ministry is more fun with a team. When you equip people to serve the children's ministry, you'll be filled with joy knowing that you've passed on what God's given you.

5 Continue to learn

Learning about improving your ministry has to be a lifelong pursuit. Read, listen to podcasts, and even attend conferences when you can. For more in-depth study that fits your budget and adapts to your schedule, Hydrate digital kidmin training and peer connection can give you the chance to learn from veteran leaders three times per month. You'll also have the opportunity to be involved in an "iron sharpens iron" relationship monthly through a Hydrate Huddle. Find out how to sign up in the sidebar on this page.

6 Work on improving your closing or altar experience

You work hard, you prepare, and you pray to get everything just right for your lesson ... but what about your altar call? Make sure you listen to the Holy Spirit on what would be the best and most memorable way to close. This doesn't mean that the Holy Spirit is not allowed to change it, but you should still have a plan to close your service effectively with clear instructions for your kids as to how they can apply the lesson to their lives. If your kids only hear and walk away without application or change, then what was really accomplished? With Tru Fire digital curriculum, you'll be able to give your kids all the tools they need to take charge of their faith and apply it to their lives.

Visit TruFireCurriculum.com to download a free sample lesson and see if it's right for you!

Take your ministry from surviving to thriving with Hydrate!

Thanks to kidmin's many challenges, it's easy to feel under-equipped and unsure of where to look for help. That's why Hydrate offers practical online training from kidmin veterans who know exactly what you're going through. Access course materials on your schedule and connect with peers on group calls, all through Hydrate's convenient digital platform.

7 WARNING
SIGNS
A CHILD IS BEING
ABUSED

NEWS ABOUT CHILD ABUSE IS NEVER

GOOD. When it involves a church, though, it can be devastating. When children are abused in church, the trust of parents is broken and the innocence of a child is shattered. Ministers must be vigilant when it comes to uncovering and addressing this problem.

Child abuse comes in different forms. The term that often comes to mind is "sexual harm." But children may also suffer physically or emotionally.

Identifying when a child has been hurt is the first step. Leaders should be aware of signs of child abuse. Here are seven of the most common.

1. WITHDRAWAL

If you notice a child is reluctant to engage with other children and especially adults, it may just be shyness. Or you may be seeing a sign of abuse. Coping with the stress and fear of abuse makes some children cut off from those around them.

2. CHANGES IN BEHAVIOR OR PERSONALITY

Look for changes in how a child acts. Are they depressed when they used to have a bubbly personality? Are they being more rebellious or defiant? Although often natural in certain stages of a child's development, they may also signal acting out in response to abuse.

3. FREQUENT ABSENCES

Parents may keep children at home to hide obvious signs of abuse, like a bruise or a cut. They may also try to cut the child off from those who may identify and report abuse. If a child is frequently absent, don't be afraid to reach out to parents for an explanation.

If a child tells you they are being harmed, believe them. Take their word for it. And follow the reporting guidelines mandated by your state law.

4. RELUCTANCE TO GO HOME

On the other hand, the child may not want to leave. Reluctance to go home may indicate that they fear their environment and want to stay away as long as possible. Make a mental note if you see this type of behavior.

5. UNEXPLAINED INJURIES

It's okay to ask questions about injuries. If parents are reluctant to answer, it may be a sign they are hiding something. And if the given explanation doesn't match the injury, they may be lying. An unexplained injury may also be a sign of self-harm, a coping mechanism that some children use when abused.

6. ADVANCED SEXUAL KNOWLEDGE

Any child that talks about sexuality should raise a red flag, but especially if it is inappropriate for their age. Although they may not have been sexually abused, they may have been exposed to pornography or sexually graphic material in the home.

7. SAYING THEY ARE BEING ABUSED

If a child tells you they are being harmed, believe them. Take their word for it. And follow the reporting guidelines mandated by your state law. Never assume they are making it up. And always follow up when a child informs any leader about a form of abuse.

If church leaders are on the lookout for signs of abuse, many of these situations can be halted or cut short. It's all about the life and well-being of the child.
