Leaving a Spiritual Legacy

God created humans to live and learn in community. As part of His omniscient design, He granted each person the ability to influence others' lives. It is a responsibility that spurs us to consider today's choices and priorities in light of tomorrow. It is a privilege that leads to the question, "How will my influence be remembered by others when I am no longer in their lives?"

Psalm 78:5-7 (ESV) shares the promise of a spiritual legacy for the children in your influence. "He established a testimony in Jacob and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers to teach to their children, that the next generation might know them, the children yet unborn, and arise and tell them to their children, so that they should set their hope in God and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments."

A Biblical Example

The writer of Hebrews recognizes the incredible faith of Moses's parents. "By faith Moses' parents hid him for three months after he was born, because they saw he was no ordinary child, and they were not afraid of the king's edict." (Hebrews 11:23)

Throughout this study we will look at this verse and the three significant principles it summarizes for leaving a spiritual legacy:

- 1 We must Model what it means to be a follower of Christ. We must focus on living a life as an example.
- 2 We must become adept in Mentoring kids toward the future that God has planned for each one. Encourage kids on their spiritual journey.
- 3 We must anchor our faith in the Word of God. This Message to humanity reveals the nature of God to us all.

It is the combination of these elements evident in our lives that creates the spiritual legacy in Psalm 78. Without one of the essential elements, our influence fades quickly or persists with unintended consequences.

Model + Mentor without God's Message = Good People

Model + Message without the Mentor = Insecurity

Mentor + Message without the Model = Hypocrisy

MODEL a Contagious Faith

By faith Moses's parents hid him for three months after he was born, because they saw he was no ordinary child, and they were not afraid of the king's edict. Hebrews 11:23 (emphasis added).

It could be easy to dismiss the impact of these first three months. However, Moses's parents ensured that the time was not wasted. Their faith was on display for Moses to see and hear even as an infant. Their trust in God was evident even as Moses was placed in a basket along the Nile and found by Pharaoh's daughter. She chose to raise Moses as her own son and hired his mother to be his nursemaid! Only God could make these arrangements.

When baby Moses was given back to his parents, Amram and Jochebed, they knew they had a few years to prepare him for a life in the palace. We can observe that a significant attribute of Moses's faith-filled life was rooted in the faith he saw modeled in his parents during his most formative years. Faith can be seen in what we do—in the choices we make, the words we speak, and the activities we prioritize. The children in our churches today are affected in a significant manner because of the quality of faith they see lived out loud in the believers around them. Are the lives they see inspiring or do they look the same as those following the world's priorities?

The single most important factor in leaving a spiritual legacy is living a life that is worthy of replicating. Your life is contagious. Make sure your faith is, too. Children and parents in your ministry are watching you and will imitate you. Be very intentional that you are imitating Christ. Our churches need to be overflowing with people who realize that how they live their lives has a direct impact on what the next generation will repeat. If we want our children to help the homeless, then we must set the example. If we want our children to be people of the Word, then they must see us in the Word. If we want our children to stand up for the vulnerable, forgive when wronged, and fast and pray, then that is the kind of faith that we must live out loud.

Here's what we can choose: to be sure our actions are consistent with the Word of God and we are continuing to be shaped into the image of Christ.

7 Steps to a Follow-Up Plan that Works

by David Reneau

If you're like me when I first started out in ministry, I didn't think about follow-up. All I focused on was doing a great event or service, and then move on to the next. But just like following through when you swing a bat is key, follow-up is as well. It doesn't feel necessary but is essential to pulling off a great event.

Here are 7 steps to a great follow-up plan for any event.

1. Postcard

No one gets mail they want anymore, and kids even less. The other day, my overly dramatic four-year-old was in a puddle, crying, because he never gets any packages in the mail.

Whether you have professional postcards printed or do them in-house, it's well worth capturing the guest's contact information and sending them a postcard thanking them for coming.

I've found that it's most effective when you send the postcard to each individual child in the household as opposed to the whole family because then it's more individualized and the kids don't have to share.

Let's be honest, most kids don't want to share anyway.

2. Give a prize

On the postcard, have a promise of some kind of prize for bringing it back. I have $1 boxes of candy I picked up at WalMart and give those to any kid who brings back the postcard I sent them. You can't beat the excitement on a kid's face when they show up with that postcard ready to claim their prize.

3. Follow up again

When you give them the prize, don't leave it at that.

I have another card that we give the kids when they turn in their postcard that invites them to come back. Also, I have an even bigger prize to give them that I show them if they bring this card back.

Studies have shown that if you can get a customer to come back three times in a short amount of time, they are far more likely, something like 80 percent, to come back again and again because it's part of their routine.

4. Add a personal touch

I don't do this for every visitor follow up card, but for VBS and for birthdays, I have their small group leader write a personal note on each kid's card.

Some of the notes are generic like, "Thanks for coming!" while others are lengthy letters of encouragement. I let the leader decide how much to write and thank them for their work.

This usually takes a little more work on my part to have everything ready before VBS is over, but I think it's so much more meaningful and heartfelt than the generic form letter or a printed postcard. The parents do, too.

5. Don't forget the parents

The tips so far have been all for kids, but you can't forget the parents. After all, if you're working with kids, the parents are often their ride. Many times, a parent won't fill out a visitor card, but they'll give you just about every bit of information about them to check-in their kids. Don't hoard this information, share it so they're in the church follow-up system.

6. Send parents an email

If the parent gives me an email address, I send them one thanking them for coming and ask if I can email them more consistently. A week later, I send them another email introducing them to my weekly emails and sell the value of reading it every week.

I give them another chance to opt out, and if they don't (they rarely do) I add them to my weekly mailing list communicating what we talked about over the weekend, upcoming events, free resources, and a blog post about parenting. Mailchimp is fabulous.

7. Continue emailing consistently

The plan above applies mainly to parents who attend on a weekend. However, many kids who come to an outreach event such as VBS don't attend on a Sunday. This makes the weekend information irrelevant to them.

Nevertheless, reaching out to parents consistently is essential to keeping the contact fresh and your email not getting pushed to spam. To do this, I create another email list for children's events. Every time I have an event coming up or have a new series, I drop an email to these parents. This keeps them connected to the church even if they're not attending and your email out of spam.

A note about mass emails. It's super easy to get spammy and become annoying to parents. Be sure to always give parents the opportunity to opt out and use a tool like Mailchimp to manage your list and target your emails. The more targeted they are, the less frustration and better results you'll receive.

Think about the emails you value the most and why you haven't unsubscribed from them. Some emails I can only handle once a month, others once a week, and a few I look forward to every day.

Don't be afraid to experiment to find the sweet spot and tell your audience what you're doing. Quality content and consistency is the best way to ensure the emails are opened and read, without frustrating your audience.

No follow-up plan is perfect, but this is the most effective plan I've found that works. Kids are coming back, parents are informed, and it's not a lot of work. What have you found that works best for you?

Your Summer Resource Guide

by Emily Tharp

Summer's coming! Every year, you have a 2-3 month stretch where you get the chance to create the kind of awesome, next-level experiences that will get new kids in your doors and keep them coming back year-round.

No pressure, right?

Planning for summer can be daunting, considering everything going on in your church and community, not to mention all the fun, summertime activities that compete with your ministry. This year, though, you won't have to worry because this guide has you covered!

From outreaches to training, check out the resources that can take your ministry's summer planning from "What do we do?" to "This is gonna rock!"

MEGA Sports Camp: HEART of a Champion

WHAT IS IT?

A unique VBS alternative that makes it easy to reach new families.

WHAT MAKES IT GREAT?

We know you want to reach new kids with your summer outreach program, and we want you to reach new kids, too! One of the best ways to do that is through a sports-based summer outreach program.

Imagine welcoming dozens (or even hundreds) of new kids to your summer outreach this year. Imagine those same kids sharing about the love and hope of Jesus with their family and friends!

With a MEGA Sports Camp outreach, you can make that dream a reality. This VBS was created for difference-makers like you!

Now What? for Kids

WHAT IS IT?

Booklets that helps adults give kids the discipleship answers they need in a format they'll understand. Great for altar calls at your camp!

WHY ARE THEY GREAT?

Now What? for Kids: Salvation

Help your team with those times following a child's salvation decision when they can be full of curiosity and need to know, "What comes next?" Read through the booklet with kids and explore common questions, their Scriptural answers.

Each chapter also features Bible readings and questions to pique kids' interest. Written from a Pentecostal perspective.

Now What? for Kids: Baptism in the Holy Spirit

Answer your students' questions about who the Holy Spirit is and what He means to their everyday lives. This booklet helps them understand what happens when they're baptized in the Holy Spirit and how God uses the Spirit to guide their discipleship journey.

Now What? for Kids: Called by God

Unpack the complicated concept of being called by God in ways that kids 9-12 can understand. This booklet will help your team teach children about what the call of God is, the different ways God calls believers, and how to seek God's guidance and plan for their lives.
